Spain Still Best Choice for Investors

Property experts believe that Spain maintains a good option for people planning to invest in real estate overseas.

A study conducted by GE Money, discovered that the majority of 100 mortgage brokers still believe that Spain offers the best value for money in the long-run, reports property specialists propertyinspain.net.

In particular, investors and holidaymakers continue to be attracted by the country's favourable climate, the local culture and a wide choice of great food and drink. In addition, the expansion of low-cost flights to the region means that many people are opting to spend more than just two weeks a year at Spanish resorts.

Sales manager Ben Walker explained: "That's a high level of commitment and it reflects the awareness and stability of the Spanish real estate market generally so far as international buyers are concerned."
